CHRISTIAN READER.

CAPTAIN George Corwin came to Salem in the Massachusetts Bay Colony in the year 1638. He was the son of John Corwin of Sibbertoft, Northamptonshire, England, and was born December 10th, 1610. His first wife was Elizabeth White, widow of John White and daughter of John Herbert. His second wife was Elizabeth Brook, widow of Robert Brook and daughter of Gov. Edward Winslow of the Plymouth Colony. Captain Corwin had eight children: Abigail; John, a merchant in Salem; Jonathan, one of the judges in the witchcraft trials in 1692; Hannah; Elizabeth; Penelope; Susannah; and George, the sheriff who hanged the witchcraft victims. He was often engaged in public affairs and was captain of a troop of horse and representative to the General Court. The house where he lived and died was located very nearly where now stands the Jonathan Ward house, now a part of the Washington House. He early became a ship-builder and shipowner and was engaged in commerce during the whole of his life. Not only did his vessels bring from England the various necessities and luxuries required by the colony, but from a shop near his house they were sold in quantities both large and small. Judging from the inventory of the contents of his shop which was taken shortly after his death, he supplied to the town's people a great variety of what would be described at the present day as dry goods and hardware. This carefully prepared list of commodities found in a Salem shop of 1685 throws much light upon the life of that time and fully

fully shows that the homes of the early settlers were not lacking in the over-sea's comforts of that period, and often times the luxuries as well. In many ways it is a surprising enumeration, containing articles that generally are supposed to have come into use at a later date. Spring locks, cupboard latches, barber's scissors and a great variety of spices are seldom associated with the supposed hardships of that early day; and the silver-laced cloth coat and satin waistcoat embroidered with gold, with the tropeing scarf, silver hat-band, and silver-headed cane (the last of which is now in the museum of the Essex Institute), display a magnificence not equalled at the present time. The inventory also possesses additional interest in that it pictures in infinite detail the contents of each room and closet in the Corwin house. From it one may easily note the furnishings and clothing of the period. While many of the articles described bear names that now are very nearly obsolete yet nearly all may be found in the Century Dictionary or in Wright's Dialectic Dictionary. It should be borne in mind, however, that the spelling is usually phonetic.
